Domestic & Foreign Ownership of USTs

While foreign central bank purchases of US Treasuries have increased on an absolute basis over the last decade, their relative share of today's over $26 trillion UST market has declined sharply since peak China and EM growth in 2014. Investment fund purchases of USTs (pension funds, insurance funds, money market funds) have increased notably since the Fed tightening cycle began in March 2022.

Holdings of Treasuries as a % of total Treasury debt outstanding

With China and EM growth (and annual surpluses) peaking around 2014, foreign central banks' ownership share of US Treasuries has been on a multi-year decline.

Evolution of Money Market Fund UST Purchases

Flows into money market funds, and money market fund purchases of UST securities, increased significantly since the Fed tightening cycle began in March 2022 - a dynamic that accelerated further post the bank sector stress of March 2023.

Investment Fund Purchases of USTs

Investment fund purchases of both the short and long end of the UST curve have been steadily rising for more than a decade now, and in particular, since the COVID crisis and Fed tightening cycle began.

Rising Overseas Demand for USTs

Through much of 2023, foreign purchases of US Treasuries were driven by the private sector. However, in 2024, demand has increased from both public and private sector entities.

Largest Foreign Holdings of UST Securities

China's holdings of US Treasuries peaked in 2013 at $1.3 trillion. Despite selling over $100 bn in USTs over the past year, China is still the second largest foreign holder of US government debt. While data is not fully transparent, evidence suggests that UST sales by China have been offset by purchases of US agency debt and other USD bonds.
